

PHYLLIS J. WALSH
PUZZLED FRENCH

"Didn't Know What to Make of Me," Says Ambulance Driver

WON MANY FRIENDS

Athletic American Girl Created Much Interest—She Has Followed Adventurous Career

As a type of the strong, athletic American girl who is a novelty to the French, Miss Phyllis J. Walsh, of Overbrook, who has just returned from Europe, created much interest and amusement among the French people, according to her own account.

"Of course, the French did not know just what to make of me," she said this afternoon with reminiscent smile as she spoke of her adventures "over there."

And in that smile one could catch a glimpse of the whole-hearted, likable girl who was suddenly diverted by something else and the third impulse was not strong enough to impel her to the telephone.

"I'll wait till he comes home to tell him," she argued to herself. "When he's about half finished dinner, he won't feel so tired."

Just the same she had scruples about what she had done, and it was only through convincing herself that Scott had been thoughtful about the other evening when he had left her entirely alone that she was able to feel at all right in her mind about it.

Scott's greeting at the door that night was unusually tender, and her heart smote her. She followed him into the living room and fused over him, insisting that he lie down on the development for a time before dinner and putting his cigarette material where it was handy.

Just as she was about to leave him, he spoke to her. "Listen, dear, I'm afraid we'll have to change our plans for tonight."

Ruth came back into the room. "Why, what has happened?" "Mother telephoned me this afternoon that Alice arrived in town today. She wants me to go over tonight and to bring you."

"I don't see why your mother couldn't have told me before that Alice was expected. She must have known."

Ruth was displeased for two reasons. One was the fact that she would have to call on Isabel Carter and tell her and that would reveal to Scott the fact that she had made an engagement for the evening without consulting him.

Another reason was that she had a very real dread of facing Alice. She felt intuitively, as women do sometimes, that she and Alice were to be antagonistic if not real enemies.

"She didn't say, and I didn't think to ask her," Scott said, "but you don't mind going out, do you?"

Ruth never liked going to see Scott's people, but naturally she did not tell him so. They had not reached the point yet in their married life when they told each other frankly what they thought about each other's relatives, if they had come to words about each other's friends.

Ruth's one thought now was telephoning to Isabel without letting Scott know. If she could do that she would not have to confess that she had made an engagement for the evening. But could she do it? Certainly she could get Scott out of the house under some pretext. She might ask him to go to the text. She might be tired and had climbed the stairs once that evening. She simply could not do that. However, Scott solved the problem himself by saying suddenly, "I forgot to get some cigarettes. Guess, I'll run down now for some."

Ruth waited till he had left the place and then she could reach it, however, the telephone tinkled and she was forced to talk for a couple of minutes to her mother. When she had finally rung off and called Isabel's number, she heard Scott coming up the stairs. Now she was in for it, she would simply have to do the whole thing before Scott.

The knowledge that her failure to tell him would seem small and petty to Scott brought the blood to her face, and just as Scott opened the door with his key Isabel's cool, well-bred voice said, "Hello."

"This is Ruth, I called you up to tell you we won't be able to come over tonight. Scott's sister is in town and he hasn't seen her in some time. We are going over there. Scott arranged it at the office. I'm so sorry. I did want to come; yes, I knew you'd understand."

Ruth hung up and raced Scott, her cheeks aflame. "You made an engagement for tonight?"

"Speaking of camouflage, the night of the armistice the American boys gave French, American and English workers a camouflage ball. It was a wild night, and every one joined in the torchlight procession of the celebration. The Second Army started a drive that night at Mousson, and took it as their final contribution to the victory."

"It was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

Miss Walsh had much of interest to tell of the camouflage, about which Americans returning from the war zone have necessarily, until recently, been reticent.

"It was sometimes amusing to see a town which had just been taken from the Germans," she said. "The streets would be camouflaged on one side in German style and on the other side in French style."

"An army of French women was kept busy painting the wooden ammunition houses so that they could not be distinguished from the fields. Many of the women were artists and they were based on the idea of just laying the paint on in meaningless splashes, so they painted pictures. These pictures were of cartoon type, and would represent such subjects as Apollo thumbing his nose at the Crown Prince."

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

GIRL DROVE AMBULANCE AT FRONT

Miss Phyllis J. Walsh, 6012 Drexel road, Overbrook, arrived at her home Saturday night. Miss Walsh was one of the first of the war women to enter St. Mihiel. As ambulance driver, nurse, relief worker and chauffeur for an American officer, Miss Walsh was often under enemy fire.

And So They Were Married

Episode Two—(Each Other's Friends)

By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

Copyright, 1918, by Public Ledger Co.

RUTH put off telling Scott about the invitation for the evening, till the very last minute. She thought several times during the day of telephoning, but each time decided not to do it. The first time she was interrupted by some one at the door; the second, her mind was suddenly diverted by something else and the third impulse was not strong enough to impel her to the telephone.

"I'll wait till he comes home to tell him," she argued to herself. "When he's about half finished dinner, he won't feel so tired."

Just the same she had scruples about what she had done, and it was only through convincing herself that Scott had been thoughtful about the other evening when he had left her entirely alone that she was able to feel at all right in her mind about it.

Scott's greeting at the door that night was unusually tender, and her heart smote her. She followed him into the living room and fused over him, insisting that he lie down on the development for a time before dinner and putting his cigarette material where it was handy.

Just as she was about to leave him, he spoke to her. "Listen, dear, I'm afraid we'll have to change our plans for tonight."

Ruth came back into the room. "Why, what has happened?" "Mother telephoned me this afternoon that Alice arrived in town today. She wants me to go over tonight and to bring you."

"I don't see why your mother couldn't have told me before that Alice was expected. She must have known."

Ruth was displeased for two reasons. One was the fact that she would have to call on Isabel Carter and tell her and that would reveal to Scott the fact that she had made an engagement for the evening without consulting him.

Another reason was that she had a very real dread of facing Alice. She felt intuitively, as women do sometimes, that she and Alice were to be antagonistic if not real enemies.

"She didn't say, and I didn't think to ask her," Scott said, "but you don't mind going out, do you?"

Ruth never liked going to see Scott's people, but naturally she did not tell him so. They had not reached the point yet in their married life when they told each other frankly what they thought about each other's relatives, if they had come to words about each other's friends.

Ruth's one thought now was telephoning to Isabel without letting Scott know. If she could do that she would not have to confess that she had made an engagement for the evening. But could she do it? Certainly she could get Scott out of the house under some pretext. She might ask him to go to the text. She might be tired and had climbed the stairs once that evening. She simply could not do that. However, Scott solved the problem himself by saying suddenly, "I forgot to get some cigarettes. Guess, I'll run down now for some."

Ruth waited till he had left the place and then she could reach it, however, the telephone tinkled and she was forced to talk for a couple of minutes to her mother. When she had finally rung off and called Isabel's number, she heard Scott coming up the stairs. Now she was in for it, she would simply have to do the whole thing before Scott.

The knowledge that her failure to tell him would seem small and petty to Scott brought the blood to her face, and just as Scott opened the door with his key Isabel's cool, well-bred voice said, "Hello."

"This is Ruth, I called you up to tell you we won't be able to come over tonight. Scott's sister is in town and he hasn't seen her in some time. We are going over there. Scott arranged it at the office. I'm so sorry. I did want to come; yes, I knew you'd understand."

Ruth hung up and raced Scott, her cheeks aflame. "You made an engagement for tonight?"

"Speaking of camouflage, the night of the armistice the American boys gave French, American and English workers a camouflage ball. It was a wild night, and every one joined in the torchlight procession of the celebration. The Second Army started a drive that night at Mousson, and took it as their final contribution to the victory."

"It was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

"I was near Mousson that the drive toward Nancy had been checked, and we could see the remnants of the old bridge which had been blown up to save the town. After that time they threw together one bridge after another, for this was a spot which had often been bombed. Over these fragile bridges, only two or three civilians were allowed to cross at a time. The sign stating this order caused much amusement among the Americans, for, translated literally, it reads: 'You must circulate in small packages.'"

SHIPYARD NEWS

CHESTER SHIPYARD GROWS

Capacity Up From Six to Twenty-four Ships a Year

The production capacity of the Chester Shipbuilding Company, at Chester, has been virtually quadrupled at a cost of $4,000,000.

Modern improvements are contemplated, which will add another million to the expenditures of the shipyard. Previously the capacity of the yard for the storage of steel, now being constructed, it will cover an area of approximately twenty-two acres. The classification yard will have direct rail communication with the shipyard proper.

Since the yard has been in the hands of the present management—eighteen months—big developments have taken place. The crane equipment has been doubled. The runways accommodate fifteen-ton electric cranes, thus permitting a more rapid erection of steel. The yard boasts of a new tool shop, another important item, costing $500,000. The fitting-out pier at the plant is 800 feet long and cost approximately $250,000. The compressor plant is being enlarged.

Ben Byrd, of the Harlan yard brick-making men, is some chortler. Ben claims in a rich colloquialism, "I Made You Cry," and other popular melodies every noon hour. His warbling is pleasing to the ear.

The report of the War-Saving Society of the Chester Yards, which shows that $3144 were invested in war-savings stamps during the week ending December 14. This brings the total investment to $285,870.04.

Every week is "clean-up week" for William Thomas, who is paid to see that everything is kept neat, clean and tidy in the Chester joiner shop.

True to the slogan, "More Production, Leaders Jensen and Caspar, of the P. & J." boiler shop are covering the floor of their shop with Howden boilers.

Harry Riding, an armature winder in the P. & J. electric shop, celebrated his fourth wedding anniversary the other afternoon.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Miss Alice adds name to the fire of Ruth and Scott's common differences in tomorrow's chapter of this story.

Special Sale $10 Field Mouse, Pearl, Battleship Gray and Brown KID BOOT $6.35

Exceptional Opportunity

If we offered you these boots at $10 you'd say they were well worth it. As it is, our huge contracts and upstairs economies have enabled us to sell them to you now at $6.35.

At this price the value is tremendous. The fashion's latest fancy—exclusive as can be—so realize there will be hundreds of other women who will want them too, and early.

SPECIAL ONLY Monday and Tuesday Come Early!

ROYAL BOOT SHOP 2nd Floor Saves $2 1206-8 & 10 Chestnut St.

WANAMAKER'S

The Down Stairs Store Is a Great Place for Last-Minute Shopping

The Luggage Store Is Filled With Gifts

There are little bags and big bags, and all of them good, useful bags at moderate prices. Most any girl would be charmed with an overnight bag, and most men travel enough to find a suit case or hand bag a really useful present.

Scores of Pretty Velvet Bags

Lovely, soft bags in all the rich pretty shades that harmonize with Winter suits and coats. There seems to be no end to the pretty mountings—some are of velvet, some of imitation tortoise shell or amber, some are gay with beads and others imitate cleverly the expensive tops of Dutch silver. Prices begin at $3 and there is a wide choice all the way to $10.

Turkish Towel Sets

These pretty sets are in all white or woven with blue, pink or yellow bands. Each set consists of a bath towel, a face towel and a washcloth—across some there is a flight of bluebirds. $1.50.

Embroidered Pillow Cases Boxed and Ready to Give

They have hemstitched hems, woven tape borders and a space for the monogram or initial. The muslin of which they are made is fine and closely woven. $1.75 a pair. With an embroidered initial these are $2 a pair.

Pink Bloomers of Three Kinds at $1.50

Two are made of batiste—one trimmed with blue ribbon and lace, the other with a frill of pink satin ribbon. The third style is of pink saten, with hemstitched ruffles at the knees.

A Warm Bathrobe Is Such a Blessing on a Cold Morning

It is nice to think that you can give so much comfort and pleasure to some one you like. Pretty blanket robes at $5 are in a great variety of colors and designs. The collars, cuffs and pockets are edged with satin ribbon, which also binds the full length of the front.

Fresh, White Chemises in Christmas Boxes

Pretty last-minute gifts that you can pick up in a moment. These chemises are made with an Empire yoke trimmed with several rows of lace insertion. $1.50.

Pink Pajamas

New ones, too, and pretty as you please! Cut in one piece these are batiste pajamas, with two rows of blue satin ribbon and lace insertion edging the surplice neck and finishing the sleeves. $3.

Gloves for Little Hands That Clap in Christmas

Children's fleece-lined gloves of tan capeskin are $1.50 and $1.75 a pair. Cape skin gloves with knit wool linings are in tan, gray and khaki, at $2.25 a pair.

Gift Raincoats

For girls of 6 years to 16. They are in navy blue, with plaid lining in the hoods, and are cut generously full. $3.

Last Call on Christmas Cards—We Have Pretty, Fresh, White Cards Full of Christmas, With Envelopes to Match, at 5c to make the last of the gifts ready for Christmas morning. Tissue paper is 20c a quire. Red, green or red-and-green ribbonene is 25c a spool. The plain-color ribbonene is 50 yards long; the other is 36.

Snow-white Tissue and Gay Ribbonene

Bonnets for Baby, Dear

Soft china silk and crepe de chine bonnets for baby are warmly padded. All are lined with silk. Some of the more expensive bonnets are beautifully embroidered by hand. $1 to $4.

Rhinestone Bar Pins 50c to $10

Brilliant, glittering stones reflect the Christmas lights in myriad colors. You will be surprised at the large selection of gallery mountings and fine filigree work. These closely resemble the platinum-diamond jewelry.

Soft Warmth for Nights

A white flannel nightgown with a double yoke is cut good and full. It is hemstitched and trimmed with pink or blue braid. $2.25.

Glittering Necklaces of pearl-like beads are 50c to $5—with an excellent assortment. Bead Necklaces of the various new kinds of beads in practically all colors are 25c to $1.

A Giftie Place Is the Commercial Stationery Store

There are gifts for men, women and children spread around conveniently—and all the practical, useful things that are in order.

Stationery, 35c to $1.50—Good linen or lawn-finish writing paper, in white or pastel colorings. School Companions, 35c and 60c, are in various colors; imitation leather.

Desk Sets, $3 to $28, are of brass or mahogany or the dainty pink and blue sets for a woman's boudoir desk. They consist of blotter and various fittings.

Paper cutters, 35c to $2. Ink wells, 25c to $1.25. Calendars, 75c to $3. Pin Trays, 45c to $2.

Among the Less Expensive Coats for Women

there is much excellent value, as many of the coats have worn much higher prices. They are of velours, pompoms, kerseys, chevots and burellas, trimmed with kit cone and sealene furs or with Hudson seal, nutria or mole fur cloths. Most of these coats are warmly lined with durable materials. Excellent Winter coats are now to be had for $15 to $25.

From $25 to $85 there are all sorts